

Dear Friend

For years I was a Conservative. I voted Tory, I volunteered at election time and I even worked for the Party. But this year I won't even be voting for them.

Right now I can't give them my vote. You're not wrong. I like Boris, but he's let us down.

I used to work for the Metropolitan Police, I believed his promises about cutting crime - but as Mayor he's cut the Police at a time when knife crime is on the rise.

I'm angry about the budget. The government are upping the tax on pensioners and charities while they reduce it for millionaires - it's just not right. And on top of that costs like petrol and fuel bills continue to rise but the government do nothing.

This year I'm sending a message to the Tory government that they can't take people for granted.

I won't be voting Tory and I won't be voting Boris.

Yours faithfully

BRETT HARRISON
